Statement for The UN Conference for the Fourth Minority Forum. Geneva 29 & 30 Nov 2011,

1. As this is an issue for the rights of at least 8mln minority women in Bangladesh, which is even more population than Switzerland, the UNO needs to consider this issue with an anxious scrutiny.
- 2, The Government of Bangladesh requires to immediately reform Family Code and enact relevant laws to ensure the rights of our minority women.
3. The women themselves need to come forward to establish and save their rights. The Government needs to arrange relevant programme and encourage internal and foreign NGOs to assist in this matter.
4. The Government needs to immediately abolish the Vested Property Act and fairly distribute the unfairly owned lands among the original owners.
5. The UNO needs to take a serious initiative to monitor these issues. Although certain countries are monitoring and assisting to establish the rights for the minority women, such as India, USA, it will be more acceptable and effective if the UNO takes relevant steps for this.
- 6: There needs the real implementation of all relevant national and international laws. The problems are not enacting the laws, but its practical implementation in minority women's real life.
7. Multi action including the cooperation among the government, the minority women, relevant organizations and the international organization; and through these concrete steps this major long time on going problems will be resolved.
