

Speaker: In the name of God. Today we are celebrating the 30th anniversary of the adoption of the rights of minorities. While it face serious challenges of implantation which needs the special attention of the United Nations, states, NGO and other stakeholders. One of the many challenges is the non-separation of the concept between [inaudible] and religious minority. Many [inaudible] in the name of religious minority may treat in war and security and peace as well as harm the moral and social security of cities by promoting deviant beliefs. Social media have become platform for the spread of hate speech and assignment of violence against minorities. On the other hand, the lack of a human rights institution to protect the fundamental right [inaudible] of minorities based on the declaration has practically distorted the respect of tradition of religious minorities. And it has provide ground for violating their right in various social and political fields by parties and [inaudible] groups.
