

Administrative Committee for the Management of the Muslim Property of Didymoteicho

Thank you. I am speaking on behalf of [inaudible], who is next to me. I am honored to participate today representing Greece, the Administrative Committee of the Muslim Property of Didymoteicho and the Muslim minority of Thrace, where I, like many other Greek Muslims, do not feel like a minority. I am a Greek Muslim and a proud citizen of this country. In addition to serving as the Secretary of the Administrative Committee, I have also had the honor as serving as a municipal counselor in the municipality of Didymoteicho. Freedom, equality, and respect for human rights, [inaudible] in Athens, continue to guide modern Greece and our deeply rooted in our Constitution and everyday life. Today, Greece is a multicultural society where citizens of all religions live together peacefully with mutual respect and understanding. The Muslim minority of Thrace is an integral part of Greek society, enjoying full rights and freedoms guaranteed by the Greek state and international treaties. My presence here aims to highlight this reality, a country where minorities are not only respected, but actively integrated, contributing to social progress and peace. A country that upholds human dignity, promotes equality, and recognizes diversity as a source of strength. As a municipal counselor elected by both Muslims and Christians, I have witnessed firsthand the spirit of cooperation that defines our community. This experience saves [inaudible] they bring to the national state. Greece is the homeland of all of us, a place where freedom, democracy, and respect flourish and where every citizen can live with dignity and hope. With responsibility and love for our country, we continue to build bridges of unity and solidarity. Greece unites, Greece inspires, Greece moves forward. Thank you.
